

one day, one of the ancestors of that man that went in that water, he didn't go with those folks in the water, he stayed out. He didn't want to go with them. He stayed with the group and didn't want to go. So, they were there. And on that day, he sneaked off. It was pretty close, you know where they camped. So he said "I'm going to go down there. I'm going to see what I could find out. See what it is." So the Kiowa-Apaches see, he got up. He went by himself. He went and went and went. Finally he got over to that place. He got over to that place and he sat down there and he took enough food to do him for two days that he was going to stay there two days. So, he sat there and he listened and he thought by sitting there he might call some of his folks in there to come out and talk to him. He thought that, you know. So, when he sat there and he was praying to the Great Spirit to ask him to bring them out, to -- so that he might see them and talk with them. And he didn't get no answer. He didn't get no answer at all or no one to talk to him about anything. Never heard anything. But he still see that track going in there. He just sat down little ways from where those teepee pole tracks was going in the water and those peoples tracks was going in that water. Still the same way, fresh as it was the day they went in there. That night they went in there. So, he stayed there two days and couldn't get no answer. Nobody talk to him, never found out anything. But certain time while he was there, certain time he could hear them dogs barking under there. Barking, barking, barking. Pretty soon that drum start beating and those boys in there hollering like that in that water they were hollering in there. Those sounds. So he went ahead and stayed there for two days and couldn't get no -- nothing out of it. So, he went on back. He got over there and he told his people, he said, "I went down two days to try to get them -- some word from the, that went in there,
