

(She just let it ferment?)

Yeah, and you know, we made, my brother and I made some one time by accident. That was the funniest thing in the world. But anyway back to my grandmother, she made wonderful wine. And there used to be a banker in Binger and he used to buy wine from her all the time. I could tell, but I won't do it--he might have some kinfolks and you know, they get you in trouble sometimes. And then there was a judge oh, he was a judge in Anadarko, I don't know, county judge, district judge, or whatever. But anyway he was the biggest judge they have. I don't know how high that is, but anyway he was--a big, he was a real good friend of my grandmothers. And anyway well he used to come out there and get wine from grandma. Oh, lot of people did. They came from miles around ~~all over the state.~~

ABOUT HER GRANDMA:

(Did, she ever get in trouble with the law for doing it?)

Oh, fiddle-de, de, I told you that old judge was her frined.

(Yeah, I know it.)

Well,

(And he took care of her?)

And she spanked the breath of life into the sheriff when he was born. And he was her friend all her life. Sok half the kids, half the people ~~ahaa's~~ from well I'll say right now, from 80 years old onto up and let's see, my sons 30 years old and my grandmother died when he was nine years old, when my boy was nine years old. So you see how long. Up until that time, she doctored half the people in the country and you know, course I except she shot a fe w of 'em too, ad far as that goes--lot of people don't know that except maybe the law or the sheriff, the judge or the law.

(And this was your grandmother?)

That was my grandmother, my mother's mother, grandma Huffman, yeah.

(She shot 'em.)

You know she was I think she gets so mad at 'em you know, ~~oo~~ course I don't blame her, I can see a lot better ~~now~~, than what I could when I was a kid, you know. She knew the trouble that girls could get into. And that was what hshe was doing to trying
