

contradicting and he just you heard that old saying You shouldn't ought done it. I mean I like to gell outa that window with this granny said, "Young man, " said, "You jest keep your shirt-tail in," siad, "You sit back down now, I'm tellin' this." that old judge, he rapped on that desk and he told that lawyer, he's outa place, you know.

Well, it didn't make any difference how everything was going how much evidence they had against grandma. They had blisters big as your hand and knots on their heads and everything. It didn't make a bit a difference to her. -- so they so this-- everything was goin' against grandma in reality you know, what I mean, the evidence was all against her. All she had was--well, she could've got my mother and my other sisters back you know, to be a witness. But seeing that she they didn't even call me to be a witness. And so the justice of the peace he fined them I forget how much--$11.00 or something like that, apiece, for disturbing the peace and court cost. And but when she told that lawyer sit down there and keep your shirt-tail in, I thought I'd fall out that window for sure.

(Well, this was the same judge that --)

Naw, he was a distrcit, he was Justice of the Peache judge--I don't know his name. I never knew him.

SCALPING:

(Now you were talkin' about this scalping thing that took place--they sewed those scalps back on--did your--)

Now, my mother was doin' it cept she was jest a little bitty kid, I don't know how old she was but you know, around 12 years old, I guess. She said she helped grandma and they saved --sewed them people's--

(It's a wonder the hair didn't all fall out for something.)

Well, you see they caught 'em jest a few hours after they scalped 'em see. And when they caught 'em well they had scalps with 'em and sh they jest--

(Well, it didn't kill those people?)

They shot some of those people got scalped, died, but some of 'em didn't, see. But they killed all those people that was the Indians and the whites, too, that did the scalpin'.
