

him. So he fought, fought just put that woman behind his horse, behind himself and took them off. Kept them so he just have to forget about him. In them days, those days, they didn't have not, I guess now, marriage license, things like that, you know. Now days you can't do that. You go over here and try to get somebody's wife, why the law is going to get your hands, you know.

(Yeah.)

But them days, there ain't no law to it. Although, they got these some kind of deputies or something, you know. But can't do no good. You just have to be really tough yourself. Go through that life. Though, I could say that my own uncle, my dad's oldest brother, he's a tough one. Any horse he like he fought for it and take it away from the owner. They just that kind of person what ever that he wants, why he'll get it.

(Did they have a way, you know, like if some man was strong enough he could take everything away from everybody, did they have any way to stop somebody like that?)

I don't think so.

(In other words, if there was just a strong man he could just...)

Just, just to show that he's a brave, that's all. Brave man could just uh-...

(Have anything he wanted.)

Have anything he wanted.

SHE WAS BRAVE, TOO. SHE TOOK ANOTHER WOMAN'S HUSBAND.

(What about the women? Were the women taught that same way?)

Yeah, some of the women rough. Yeah. Some of the women's rough and uh- I kinda tried it myself. That man knows it too, right there by the tree, sitting right there. I took, I took his brother away from his wife. I took him away in this Anadarko street like this all this Anadarko street. I had a car and I come along and I parked. And they were standing right there to-
