

And that's when this Dr. Lineham which used to be there. He's a more like a Indian. Every Indian liked that Dr. Lineham. He's good. You know how come I know he's good when that, my uncle got hurt like that, why some of these patients, they got little kids, you know, and this doctor always holler at my dad, "See that man walk away, come here. Why don't you poke these kids good for me. They got sore throats. They have temperatures. Oh we just go through, see them babies, they got cribs what they name," and he just go through all.

(He was a white doctor?)

He was a doctor like Fred. He runs that hospital. His name is Dr. Lineham. He was a doctor, old doctor. He was a good one, they know him. He used to be there, he's an old man. He was a good doctor. He liked Indians. Any kind of, type of Indians. They could get along with him good, you know. But now these new doctors we got, they just have to be certain thing they want to take you in on.

MORE ABOUT HORSE RACES

(Horse races, back, what kind of bets would they have? Did they bet on them?)

Well, them days way back there, some of them bet money. I know one time when we win, we had then, I don't know, I guess it's so many pounds. It's a big box of crackers. And it was not salty, you know. It was unsalted crackers in a box, big size. We got that and we got a flour and coffee and sugar and then I don't know how much cash was with it. That's they way, you know, way back there they pay them like that, you know.

(They have any special kind of medicine for the horses before they brought them? What kind of things did they do?)

Secret. There were things but it's a secret.

(Okay. If I had to keep a secret, I don't think I could. What about that woman you told me about, a Comanche woman she, down in Mexico? What was that?)
