

first you--I got to go get my cheating medicine. It's about three miles away. I don't know if I can get it because it's far and I don't have any shoes and I'm tired. Could I borrow your horse to ride over to get it?" The cowboy let the Indian cheater borrow his horse but when the Indian went to get on the horse the horse shied away, "The horse doesn't know me and is afraid. Let me borrow your hat and outfit so the horse will think that I am you, then I can go get my medicine and we can have our contest." The cowboy did like the Indian cheater said because he was wanting to hurry up and have the contest so he could show the Indian cheater that he was the best cheat...better than the Indian cheater. The Indian cheater rode about ten yards away and then turned around on the horse and started laughing and laughing. While the cowboy stood there barefoot, with no horse and no clothes. That's how the Indian cheater got to be best.
