

going to partake of bread and water. I want all of you all that are here today. Not just Indian people, but all of you all that are here today, waste majority, and let us thank God that God has brought us, all together here for God's purpose here. Let us pray for these people that they maybe strong Christians and live according to their belief." So he talk there for a few minutes and then when he got through he tapped a bell and as soon as he tapped the bell, the school sung, one song, one hymn. When they got through, he tapped a bell and they all stood up, the whole school stood up and he got through, he blessed the food, he prayed and he blessed the food. When he got through, he tapped the bell and they all set down. When he set down there he tapped the bell and they all start eating. They start eating. They got to eating and he told them to take their time and eat. If there is any more there, well there is plenty more. The--will bring in barbecue meat and all that stuff, you know, all kinds of meat cooked up and boiled, fried, and--had hog meat and they had beef and they had all kinds of dressings on that table you know, everything for those--all those womens they had to prepare that, you know and they had plenty. And when they got through, father he got up and he said, "Folks, we would stay here longer but it's a long ways, by the time we get home it will be dark. We hate to rush but we have to go. It's an awful long ways for a wagon. They can't travel like the car we travel in today. So my grandfather and my mother, they went up to him, my uncles and the other relatives, they went up there and they shook hands with him and they thank him for coming over his school and all of that, he told father, "Father, if you want to take some meat, there is a table over there and there's about three piles over there yet, you go ahead and pick it out and you take it with you to your school that you might need it." So father went over there with two sisters and fathers went up and got the meat, you know, this hind quarter. kThey picked it up some ribs. They picked them out and they took about four hind
