

white womens and those Indians womens how much he owe for helping them on this what they done. They got to have something for what little they done for us here. We appreciate what you done. And they said, "No. We're not going get one penny off of you. You done too much already. We not going to charge anything because we're going to eat and that's our pay--what we eat." Well, then my grandfather was happy over it and told them that when they got through everything, he said they could go there's a lot of meat left there, "You all can divide it up among the people. What's left. You all go ahead and take what's left. Don't let anything go to waste. Take it to your home. You get a little use out of it. We don't want to waste it." So this white woman who was the boss of all that work she went over there and told them people, she said, "All right you folk remember, you all don't act like hog, you all just go ahead and take what you think you need and go ahead, go on and take it. But don't go over there and just get more then you need. And go ahead,, that's wasting. Told them womens you know. So they went and got meat, and what stuff they want you know. They got every=thing you know. so everything was done so everybody left. It was getting long about 4 close to 5 and it all was over. So they said, "Well, this is our dinner and this is our supper. We got so much that we can't hold anymore." So everybody got full. So they all left, and all the tables there was there and all cleaned up and everything. So we stayed there after that feast, we stayed there about two weeks with my grandfather, stayed with him. Then during that time when we living well, Father Isadore told my mother he said, "Mary Pallie, you can bring your boys in about two weeks or three weeks. Let them take vacation. I'm going to let them stay out of school that long." Well, he was thankful you know, for what my grandfather done for him, the school.

GRANDFATHER'S DEATH:

So we didn't go and I stayed there with my grandfather after my mother left and I went over there and I stayed with my grandpa and grandma, I always
