

breath so they had to chase them kids out. They got the wheel down and sent them out and they went outside. They couldn't stand it. Boy, and that thing, smoke just went all out. It so bad, they couldn't stand it. So all that cleared out and them boys they left. They couldn't stand it. Boy, and that thing, smoke just went all out. It so bad they couldn't stand it. So all that cleared out and them boys they left. They went down there and that old lady come. "Where you all been, I've been hunting for you all. Looking for you?" He said, "We been down there to that tent over there and that man told us to come in. They try to smoke us out and kill us there and that smoke, but they couldn't do it so they liked to get killed himself, with the smoke him and his wife. So they got our wheel down and give it to us and told us to go on." She said, "That's just what I didn't want you to do. To go over there and do that. That man kills people, and he eats them after he kill them. You boys crazy, you shouldn't do that." That's what he said. So, that was the end of her story. That one story there. Maybe you could put it off for awhile till she ready. They have that medicine over there, and all the Kiowas knows that story. This boy here was one, but when that wheel fell on his head he become two boys instead of one.

(What was the second boy's name?)

They said between boys. They call them Between Boys. That's the way they call them--they call them that. See, Between Boys. That's the way they pronounce it in English. Alright now, she's going to tell you another one. (Mary tells it in Kiowa) She said, "This is an old story way back in there when there was a lot of Kiowas camped. Big camp there you know. Close to a big river there, close to big timer there they camped there and there was a little child was born and he was a boy and so the mother of that boy was--in that night when he goes to sleep, he raise him up, you know, like a cradel blankets all around and he gets the buffalo robe and he ties him all around in the night so he can sleep warm. lSo he tie that little baby up you know. So one morning
