

up there and her dogs was follerin' her you know. And she said, "I want to see Tom Oaks." He come out there. Says, "All I can hear lately is pig botherin' Tom Oaks and I come after pig." (Laughter) He wanted to get her in good humor--he got around and he was kinda punchin' 'er and tryin' to devil 'er and she wouldn't look at 'im at all. She just plumb stubborn, you know--pig botherin' Tom Oaks. She took the dogs along and put that pig in the road and the dogs drove 'im home. (More laughter) Well, she was a curiosity. That woman was a curiosity.

(Indian woman?)

Yes. She was Indian. I told--we have some member of our church up there now close--bought land in there. I told 'im, I said, "I haven't been up there for years and years." I said, "You all live about side of the Durant place, don't you?" They didn't know nothin' about Sally Durant. I said, "Well, I did." He wanted me to go home with 'im sometime and show 'im 'bout it. I said, "Well I think I can find the place." He said, "Well, now there's a log cabin down west of us a piece and somebody said that was where she lived." I said, "It might a been, it's been, well I ain't been there since statehood." And I said, "I used--" I said, "My friend had his mother-in-law was buried there, close to Sally's place. And if I was there I think I could find the grave." I says, "I was there when the funeral was." So, I never got to go over there. I thought I would get over and take a look at that sometime and find out about it. And one time Spencer Academy burrt. It burned once, you know, and they built it back and it wasn't long till it burnt again. Government never did build it any more. So they disposed of the property.

FATHER BUYS "HOG MARK" FROM SPENCER ACADEMY

My father, Oscar, well, let me see, I can't think of the name now, part Indian feller, he bought the hog mark. Had hogs all around over the country and they bought the hog mark. And my brother, they got a man to
