

you" and "Get up, I want to talk to you." And I got up and put my hair, comb my hair, dressed up; you know in the fall it's kinda of cool already and she said, "I got to see you." So I got up and she came back here. Said, finally I said, "Come in here." Asker her to come in here. She said, she said, "I want a smoke." And she had leaves, oak leaves is what we use and cornshucks. We don't use cigarettes or smoke you know. Long time they used to use them pipes. We don't do that no more. And she had some oak leaves that she rolled cigarette with. She light it and she gave it to me. She puffed about four times and when she puffed four times I knew what she was after. She wanted me for a doctor. And so she gave me this cigarette. I ain't supposed to refuse it. Anybody come and give me a smoke like that and tell me what they want I'm not supposed to refuse it. I don't care how sick they are, I got to go. So she gave it to me and then I puffed that and she talked. She said, "Oh, I need a doctor my grand daughter is pretty sick. Her face is all twisted up and her eyes is setting way back there." And I said, "I don't know if I could do it any good or not." I said, course I never did doctor anybody that--ever since my mother died.

(About how old were you when she came to you?)

I was grown up. That girls about, about nineteen years old-now. And she was about just about five, ten. And she was about oh, I guess--

(About six.)

(Then how old were you then?)

Oh, I was way up in age already, old. In my thirties, I guess. Thirty eight something like that. I had kids already. I had about three or four of them already.

(You said that she came in, she made cigarette and she puffed it four times and she gave it to you. And then you knew what she meant after that.)

Yeah, I knew what she meant then.
