

Yes. He was here, come in.

(How did that happen? I mean, what happened?)

It just come in because I said I didn't have no feather. Come in, I went out there and talk, call for help. I call my uncle help and my mother. You could feel, you could just see the presence of them. They were just standing right by me. They didn't talk but just they made motions. Went like that, go ahead. That means go ahead after I come in, I said "I ain't--didn't have no feather." And oh, long time after that when I got her well I was dreaming and this man came in and he was standing right by my bed. And he said here's your peyote. He handed, great big peyote, his hand was dried ~~right~~ all over the palm of his hand. Just as clean and just pretty. He hand it to me like that. He said, "Here's your expense, take it." And I went like that and I--it's colder, I couldn't pick it up. It was--just seem like went in my hand. And I could feel it just moving in my arms way up to here. And I went like that it was gone. And then after while I saw his hand again. And he said, "Here's your feather, eagle feather." And he went like that. Then all at once I saw that hand go away from me. And the next morning--you know what I sure--letter from my uncle--he lives at Geary, "Let's go see him." And so we pack up and we beat it down there. We got there about five o'clock and we visit him three or four days. And when we was coming he said, "Niece," he said. I said, "What?" I said, "We're going home uncle." "Why you hurry?" About the first of the month we all get check first of the month and we'd like to pay our bills and our light bills are due. He said, "Oh, I'm so sorry you're all going." He went in that room and he open his suitcase, he said, "Come here." And I went in there. And he had about twelve eagle feathers. And he hold it out. He said, "Which one do you want?" And I pull out the best one, I thought. And I pull it out and he said that's one you have it, you take it home. And that Saturday I dream of it was given to me by my uncle. Because I didn't have no
