

Police. There was about one telephone for every 9000 people.

(They ever catch any of these people?)

Yeah. They shoot 'em. That's the way they caught 'em. ((Laughter))

They shot 'em and killed 'em. I'm not kiddin' you a dimes worth. When they caught 'em doin' somethin', that's the only way they could do. They just kill 'em tight there. That's what they did to Ed and Joe Kelley. They followed us to Texas, I don't know that they followed us but anyway, they came to Texas, when we did. That's where they got killed. Went down there and pulled a robbery. They was on the police force in Ranger, Texas.

(My)

Yeah, they pulled robberies. Now, I don't know whether they's on police force here or not. But they used to eat at our boarding house. See. And you know this was crazy, but - you know lot o' times men folks teasing little girls say, "Well you wait and when you grow up a little more I'll come and we'll get married." You know this talk. I don't know how big I was but I was no little kid like these. I was - but I was little for my age. See. I had big rising on the cack side of my leg, one time, and mama said you could put a cup around it. Anyway, I was sittin' in this big chair and I couldn't hardly get down. I wanted to get down and this leg was so sore and this Ed Kelley came around and picked me up and right where his fingers were and busted that and I screamed and he tried to make up to me and he was always teasing me that, you know, that I was his girl and we'd get married. And I just wondered about marriage then, 'cause my older sister was gettin' married. see. And I looked up at him, and I can remember that as well as anything. I was madder than I was hurt. I looked up at him and said, " I wouldn't get married, and if I did I wouldn't marry no Lee Kelley." That's my husband name, Kelley. I was madder than fire.

(What was that you had on your leg?)
