

I'm going to do now, is I'm going to cross over there--" there ground was Kiowas already living across over in there where the church ground is today.

(The Hog Creek Mission?)

Yes, right there. So they were living there. So my grandfather said, "Well, I'm gonna go over there and I'm gonna talk to those people. I'm going to try to trade 'em. I am going to give them cattle and I am going to give them this cattle and horses whatever amount they want to give me that land and I'll give them this cattle and horses, and they can move away, and I'll take my ex-wife over there--my second wife--over there and let her live over there." So he done it. He went ahead and went over there and talked to these people. So they agreed. They said, "We will take so many cattle, so many horses." So the next morning they went over there and they picked 'em out--what they want--horses. They drove them off and from there they moved away. They move away from there, so from there they moved away. So my grandfather took his other wife to right there and camped her right here where this church ground is now. Right there where Ware's Chappel Church is right now. That's where he went and put up a tipi there, and that's where she been ever since.

(Ad they already been allowed over there?)

No, they were allotted yet. It was before they were allotted. Well, he went and traded for that. So, after that, then you see the guy Ware was the one that got the allotment over there. Buy Ware. It was one of my grandfather's other wife, that was telling you about that he moved over there.--that was her boy.

(What was his name?)

Guy Ware.

(Lincoln? She got married again when she moved over there?)

No, I don't think she did.
