

Because another rain was coming, from the northwest. And that was just a good (heavy) one, just like the one we passed, you know. Looked like it's rough. Well, I just about that time-- there was a car stopped. And he asks me how was the road back towards south. And I told him, I said, "It's all right. They had a little flood down there, but they got it cleared up now, and the water all drained out." And I said, "That rain's going towards the south--I don't know certain place the other way." And I asked him how was the road to Pueblo. I asked him if he come from Pueblo. He said, "Yes, I come from there. The roads are all right." He said, "There's rain coming, but you can get out from under it if you drive fast enough." So we eat on the run! Boy, what I mean--I had that Packard flying! So we got out from under it.

So we got to Pueblo for breakfast. We eat breakfast there. Course, I was tired. And we started towards Colorado Springs and went through there, and we pass Denver. Pass Denver, and when we got out of town a little ways, we bought something to eat. We had a little snack there on a drive-in. And from there we went on into Wyoming. We stopped at Cheyenne. There's a big drive-in there on the east side of the road. It was right on the east side of the airport. Army base, looked like. So we got some barbecue there. They had a big sign on the road that said "Barbecue." So me and the Old Man (Apache Ben), we got meat--barbecue meat--and John Fletcher got pork ribs. It made him sick. So we went on. We kept going. We never stopped. See, when I started, that was Monday. So we stopped at a place they call Wheatland. That's in Wyoming. We stayed all night there.

PREJUDICE AGAINST INDIANS IN WYOMING AND MONTANA

(In a motel?)

Yeah, in a motel. Of course we didn't double-(up)--they made us--I don't know--they made us--regulation--I had to take a bedroom, and my stepfather had to take a bedroom. It's a separate village. John Fletcher, same way. And that's the only way they took us. (Sounds like they were being exploited in a state where Indians were not welcomed as customers--jj).
