

walk through the timber to the river. He was just living. He be walking back up the river. He always go that way. He always have arrows. Bow and arrows. He always carry bow and arrows. He's walking along the bank of the river. And he saw the big mound on the south side--big mound. Kinda tall mountain. But it's not big like we have. He was coming. He stand there. Maybe he's studying something about something. He hear the drum. Just like that--pu-pu-pu-pu-pu--like that. "Oh, there's some people somewhere dancing. Where I'm gonna look for them?" And he walked on again. And there was some bird was running behind, towards him, on the road--running. And he said, "My friend, where that drum come from I heard?" "Yeah, I know it, I know it--I just live down there and I saw you pass. See that big mound over there? They have prairie dog city over there, and they're dancing. They having good time. They dancing." "Oh, I like to dance. I'll go and I'll join in and I'm going to dance. I like to dance." When he get there he likes it. And he went on. Oh, he came near and lot of prairie dogs--they big ones--like dogs. They used to have prairie dogs--big ones. And he saw one little one, but he's just a puppy. He's dancing edge of them, jumping around.

"Oh, you're such a little cute dog!" He just look at him and said, "Yeah." That dog just dance and he was just dancing and Sainday began to dance and he tall, and now he dancing. And the prairie dog chief say, "Hey, what kind of man you are? We don't need you over here." "Oh no, I like to dance. I like to join in. I tell you what I'll do. I'm going to sing for you and you're going to dance." And that one say, "No, we don't want you over here. Get away. You don't belong over here. Get away!"

"No. I'm going to eat those--" He always don't mind. Well, he just try hard to get in. That's the way he is, Sainday. That's why they call him
