

back till the sun goes down." And she goes, "Hurry up and come out. I eat lots and I'm sleepy. I be sleep and you come in and you lay down." Quick as she went out the boys took her and they ran away with her. Now they carry her way off. Night, night, night, night. And now after maybe she woke up, the girl was gone. Now she follow her. "I'll get her. I'll get her." She's crippled. Her foot hurts her. She's coming. Because she's some kind of medicine bear. She goes, further. Way off, up that way (pointing north), I guess. And that girl said, "Now boys, I'm going tell you this. That bear, she's sure bad. Now anything won't go through her body." And one of these boys said, "Yeah, we'll show her. We'll get her. Ain't going to get you." They was running way up there. And after a while, two days, they're going. And this girl looked back and said, "Boys, there she's coming. She's coming." They look back and she was coming, running. They don't know what to do. I told you you that girl just screaming, they carry her on their back. And they carry her (with) both hand-- They're going towards that way (north). Where that stone at? (This question directed to Mrs. McDaniels.)

(Mrs. McDaniels: Yellowstone.)

That's where they went. Yellow park national stone. That the stone that rise up. That's the one. They been up there (referring to her daughter and family). I was with them but I didn't go with them. I just stayed home. That girl was just screaming. Those boys say, "Oh, never mind! She ain't going kill you, no!" They going kill her. Quick as she come there, "Gr-r-r-r-r--I'm going kill everyone!" There's seven of them and the girl was eight. There he come near. And the boy said, "Any god that want save us, save us. We don't want get killed by anything in this world." And they was coming. And there's a big rock. It was just flat, laying there, that rock. And that rock began
