

went to the sky. They lay on the sky.

(That's really a good story.)

KIOWA "TRUE" STORIES

That's a good story. Kiowas loves to tell stories about that story.

(How do you say "story" in Kiowa?)

hē.tēg<sup>y</sup>ā

(How do you say "ture story?")

podl^ē.hē.tēg<sup>y</sup>ā Or--(She gives another term which is difficult to hear.)

Both ways. They call that Bear-Girl story set^ōdlmah They call her Bear Girl. set^ōdlmah She chase the whole group and kill every one of them. She kills own daddy and mama, too.

(Are the Sainday stories, do you call them true stories?)

No. Sainday story ain't--maybe it's true. I don't know. They call it--and they say, "This is a true story"--that Yellowstone National (The Bear-Girl story). The stone was setting up there. See, it was true. The bear pretty near knocked that stone down. She saw it when they went up there.

(Do they have a name for the Sainday story?)

I tell you some more Sainday story when we through with our dinner.

(Do they have a name for the Sainday story?)

No. Yeah, they got a name. I call Sainday cadokōdl -- that's a Sainday Story.

(I think she's referring to a specific story--the first one about cheating the prairie dogs.--jj). I tell you about the Windy Woman.

(When, now?)

SAINDAY AND WIND WOMAN

I tell you it. It's windy. You know these winds? You can't see them.
