

Just like a skillet, just like a skillet, round and they put cover on it, put ashes on top and anything you make it go put it in there then put that lid on, and put the coal up. They cook good and they sure good to eat.

(That's what we call a Dutch oven too. Wonder why they call it Mexican oven? Do you know why they call it a Mexican oven?)

Yeah, they call it Mexican oven. Mexicans sell them and they show how to make bread. There's where they know.

(Did there use to be a lot of Mexicans around here?)

Yeah, some of them here. They use to visit them. Sell them some things-- Blanket-like things, they sell it to them.

(Did you ever see them?)

Nah. . .

(Yourself? Did you see the Mexicans that were selling things?)

No, I don't know. I never did see Mexicans bring things. Way back, but when I was growing, they don't come to sell things, no more.

TIPIS AND TIPI POLES

(Well, inside of the tipis, did they have beds, or any kind of chairs or anything like that?)

No, they don't have no--- They just had a bed all around. But they put something under it and put some sticks and some kind of straw and make their beds. They're soft. They lay there.

(Did you like living in a tipi?)

Sure, I like to live in a tipi.

(What did they use for the tipi covers, did they use cloth or did they use hides? I don't understand--- What did they make their tipis from?)

Canvas. Government furnished for them and they--when I know, way back, they
