

Ruth: She was captured by the Kiowas.

Charlie: And that's where - - I've got lots of relatives that's been bought. You know, they're no blood, they just claim relation. That's right. Old Man - - Old Man Pallie - - was captured among those Comanches first, and then my grandma, she was captured to Kiowas. And then when they went and bought this Pallie - - the Kiowas bought him - - in. So they raised him, and then they got acquainted, and they got married.

Ruth: He married two women. Your grandpa had another wife - - these Ware's grandmother - - Charlie: Then, the Ware's - -

Ruth: - - he had two wives. They were mountain people but his grandfather went up there and bought her and got this place for her down here to live, you know.

Charlie: So brought her down here, and they lived down here, and he was living up there. And he'd go over there and stay with her and just - - you know - -

Ruth: - back and forth - -

Charlie: So that's the way that story went.

Ruth: - - he brought her down here (to Hog Creek)

(I think that's great. I like your grandpa. I like your dad, too.)

Ruth: He was the shiek among the Indians, his daddy.

Charlie: This last time, he was married to a white woman.

Ruth: Yeah, this last one was a white woman.

Charlie: Her name was - -

Ruth: - - Jackie Andrews - -

Charlie: - Andrews. She's young. About the same age as you, aint' it?

(Where was she from?)

Charlie: This lady? She was from Lawton.
