

is. I'm going to throw it way across the water and it's going to come back to me." Just like a magician, I saw this morning on TV so he was trying himself out the first one he tried out, throw it over there and he made some kind of talk to himself and then went like that and it was that and it was in his hand and my father was surprised. "How did you do that?" They were both young, you know, and he came home and told his mother, you know. "Oh, don't be talking like that." So he began to tell story when he got older--you know when I went down the creek when I was younger--said I was in a big ocean--I dreamed I was in the ocean. All kinds of animals came to me to pity me, and one gave me pice of their medicine. Every one of the wild things grow in the water and this one gave me the big medicine, he said. Other picture of the otter by the door said when you get big you have a tipi made and put the picture of the otter by the door--and put rainbow around the bottom. That's what this otter told me when the animals were down there at the bottom of the ocean and the snapping turtle and the one that gave me that medicine-- he said "Put a picture of snapping turtle right in the back of it with a peace pipe under it." And he kept thinking about all that, you know and told told my grandmother so my aunt had a tipi made like that and he had a tipi like that when he was living and whenever they want him to make medicine they go down there and doctor them.
