

Sunday morning, well, and there was a fellow named Amos Koma, he holds service there every Sunday morning, Sunday School and preach after dinner, - - I mean preach after Sunday School. That morning, after he got through preaching, he made an alter call, and whoever wants to join up with the church, I mean give themselves to the Lord, reconsecrate his life to the Lord, he said, "We want him to come forward to the alter." And he was the first one. So, we was all surprised, you know, and we all joined up with him. And there he was, he was give his self up to the Lord. And then from that time, he went to Sunday School every Sunday, and he composed a song. The very couple of weeks after he got converted he composed a song. And from that time, he was pretty well interested in the way the Lord had forgiven him for his sins and from that time he quit smoking and he quit drinking, and when he done that, well they ask him that he wuld try to make a preacher out of him self. He said he would. He studied the bible every day. He bought him a magnifying glass. He bought that and he read that bible every day. Finally he got sick. We took him to the hospital and he studied that bible every day. When he got out, well, they build us a church there between Indianahoma and Cache, Oklahoma. Then we all moved over ther. We pitch up a tent. They was fixing the church, building the Church. Brought the lumber and everybody give a hand and volunteered to help build the church. And I noticed my day. He goes down across the road, blackjack thickets out there. He go down there for hours and he come back, then finally he made a preacher. And they post him there, they give him a preacher's license and from that time when the church came up, was established, well, he was a preacher.

(What church was that?)

Nazarene. He was under Nazerene movement then and he kept on. Finally, they had a preachers convention at Oklahoma City, at Municipal building there in Oklahoma City. And each preacher give his report; how many converts he took in and how many people he baptized. All those things and they come to a place where they ask him, "What school, what college did he went to?" You know those
