

CHILDHOOD GAMES:

(What kind of games did you like to play when you were little?)

Yeah, I remember that we used to live at Blue Beaver when my mama and dad were still living, we live at Blue Beaver and we had these cow hide and we just live near the creek, there's steep hill. And we get on that cow-hide bunch of us girls, we go down there, slide down there on it.

(What other games do you like to do?)

Oh, I don't know just what we play. We just go visit some our folks and we as kids, we just chase each other, you know, run-run.

(What kind of things did your mother teach you to do?)

Oh, I don't remember, I was just little girl. She even take us to church, that's all I know. We go to church on wagon, you know.

(Which church was that?)

Dio Mission.

DEATH OF PARENTS:

(When did your parents die?)

I don't no--I was maybe five years old when my daddy died. My daddy died and we was in a tent you know, living in a tent. There was a lot of people camping all together here and there. West Cache Creek, south of West Cache Creek. We was in a bunch with them and my daddy died there. I remember we went and bury him, I don't know how far north, we buried him. But about 1912 or something like, I just don't hardly know that, that part. Because my mama died when I was married and I didn't get to go to her funeral, until late they told me, and I went and couldn't find them.

(When your father died, did your mother do any kind of thing to show she was in mourning for him?)

She just cut her hair but she didn't do anything. People at that time when their husband or their child die who they reall love, they cut some--their finger or cut something off, cut like this on their body, but I didn't see
