

bunch. Did he told you? He said they were going somewhere--a bunch of people in wagons and some was on a horse--we might be in that bunch, I don't know because they were going towards west and he said that his wife Quannah' Parker's aife, were on a horse. They had guns, said there was a elk. Jump the dogs jump it and it was running and the ladies were chasing it and the ladies was just shooting at it and they didn't kill it though but it jump over somebody's wagon and run off--that elk. Old man said whoever kill, when they kill the game like that, when they going you know. He said the people jump down somebody to holding the front legs, some be holding the back leg. Whatever they hold, that's their meat and the one that kill it just take the backbone and the head. That's what he told one that's the only thing. He told me--he said he seen that because he was with them. He was big boy already--he seen that.

MARY POAFPYBITTY:

(Could you tell me anything about Mary Poafpybitty?)

My grandson Sammy he hade a stooke. His wouth was way up here and his eyes--he could hardly wink his eyes. I look him down, to Mary's and I rolled the smoke and I give it to her. I paid you doctor my boy for me, I said. She said all right. So she look him in other room and doctored him and we went there 2 days. For 2 days we go to have him doctored and in these 2 days his eyes got straight. He could wink his eyes and his mouth got straight. And then this other boy had a stroke too when I was away. He wrote and told me they were taking him to Oklahoma City to the doctor up there. So I came back home and I took him down to Mary's too. This arm he could hardly move it and Mary doctored him too. You have to gain them a smoke you know. Roll it up in a corn shuck and give
