

Games, but afterward, take like killing rabbit and things like that, you take bow and arrow, course they wouldn't know, probably kill a rabbit, you can see one settin' just anywhere and it is no work--shoot one of them. These bow and arrow, in them days, maybe they own the arrows you know and the spears. We try farming, we didn't have no cattle or nothin.' Course there was a lot of cattle, but never did own any. Way back in these horse day, horses' day, them days they would work them horses and wagons and things like that. Didn't have tractor, or anything like they do now.

MOTHER ATTENDED SCHOOL AND LIVED IN ORPHANAGE

(Do you remember anything about your father and mother in their real early days, the family, where they lived and how they lived?)

No, I don't. Well my mother used to tell us, though, that time before she was married, she used to go to school out here where it use to be an orphan home down here, school down here. She said that after her parents was gone, orphans kids, you know, they take little girls. But them days, why it's funny that them days, seem like when they take orphan girl, you can tell orphan girl then. A baby, brother, somebody 8 or 9. They have their hair cut just right across, just like that, cut their hair and that away you could tell that their all orphan kids. Didn't have no home or things like that. And them days my mother use to say that she had her--bobbed her hair just like I told you straight across, cut here hair and then they sent them down to these orphan home.

(Did they have stomp dances in early days?)

Back south of Peg in the Clear Creek Spring, somewhere down in there. That was way it was in them days.

(What were they like? I've never been to one in this country?)
