

and so this General Sheridan I think (--). Anyway he told my grandfather said, "Now don't worry about that old dresser," said, "If we get separated and ddn't see one another, well just take it on." Well my grandfather was going down through a hollow or whatever you call it, you know, a dip and there were some people hiding the money, you know, I guess out of the bank or whatever it was and so anyway they got killed. For some reason or another my grandfather didn't get hurt. So, he just jumped out of the wagon and they was puttin' money in an old stump, see, bale money and my grandfather picked up this bale money and he had no idea how much it was and just threw it on the wagon and beat it. Later he saw this place where he thought would be a pretty good place to hide it and it was a hollow in a big tree and he stick it off there because he didn't want to get caught with it. Well, as it turned out they weren't really chasing him, you know. They were chasing some other--it was southern soldiers chasing the northern. See. My grandfather was a southerner but he was on the Northern side. Well, later the war ended and later my grandfather went back through there to see if he could find that. Well, it was marked and a million dollars. But must've been somebody see if he could find that. Well, it watchin' him because he put it back and put some sticks over it and then he was going to go on into this town about 30 miles from there and make a report of it. See. And 'course when they went back to get it, it was gone. And lot of 'em thought that my grandfather took it. But he didn't. Now my grandfather met my grandmother when she was a little bitty kid, you know, before the war. And anyway, he was 30 years older than my grandmother. You know men tease little girls and say "I'll wait and
