

So Jesus, and how hard it would be for his disciples when they took over.

SERMON IS FROM 11th CHAPTER OF JOHN

Our lesson is from the 11th Chapter of John. And it's the 21st Verse through the 27th Verse and it's also on the 40th through the 44th Verse. We'll all read this and see what we can get out of it. (Responsive reading) These are the lessons we have had. They were Jesus's way of trying to make the people understand what he had been saying. And now we come to the part where he's--comes to place where he does--he had been here before, but now these are his friends. And Jesus had been in this house. Martha and Mary were sisters. Lazarus was their brother. They had to live such a life, that had such home, that Jesus like to come here. It was home to him while he was here. He was welcome. He could come here and feel at home. And rest from his journeys. He had come to love it. And we see that now Lazarus was taken sick and his sisters were worried and you know the first thing they thought of was sending for Jesus. Now in studying the lessons, it come to me that what it would be like in each of our homes, if Jesus came and went through the country preaching. Teaching the people. Well, he would feel welcome in our home. In our way of living, the way we treat our neighbors, those we come in contact with. Whether it would be so that Jesus would feel at home and whether he would want to come and be with us. Come in and sit down. And I thought we as a people, we could read our Bibles as we do here, study it. I don't mean just read it over like we would some story or novel. I mean study it. Then look at ourselves, whether we could pass the test with our homes. Would it be like this home was and whether we could treat Jesus as they did, until he could feel at home. Willing to come stay and rest when he was weary.
