

Your mother's land?)

My mother's land--?

(Roy: Where Miss Robinson lives.)

No, that's my grandma's land. My mother's she ain't got no land. That's just my father's land over there where May--north, you know. But we sold it. I don't think my mother got no land. She died before they get land I guess.

(Where was your father's land?)

Right there. This way, north. Where, you know, the woman died, May, right there on north side is my father's.

(May who?)

May Bezhrize (an Apache term)

(Roy: Oh right here, east of Hatchetville, isn't it?)

Yeah. On north side. That time my father's land, but we sold it you know.

(Roy: It's two miles east of Hatchetville and about a mile north.)
You know Cleo's mother?

(Roy: Yeah, it's just right north of that place.)

(Then, where was your grandpa's land?)

Which one?

(You mother's father?)

That's Yada'ilniix -- his land was in town--in Cement.

(Roy: She was raised in town there at Cement.)

(Yagoc'a. where was her land?)

Right there on west side.

(Roy: About mile and a half isn't it? About mile and half west of town there.)

That's my grandma's land right there west.

(Do you know how many children did Yagoc'a. and Yada'ilniix have?)

She ain't got very much children.

(Roy: How many did she have? Your grandma, you don't know about her kids? Your grandpa either?)

No.

(Roy: She don't know. See, that time long time, they don't keep track of nothing.)

(Well, was she the mother of Apache Ben?)
