

school. Was little girl and we went to school over there. They quit the school and we come back to the mission over there, Anadarko mission. We go to school over there too.

(Was that St. Patrick's Mission?)

Yes. Me and my sister, we go to school over there.

(Was that that Catholic school?)

Yeah. You know where Anadarko is, on that highway, that school over there. But no more school over there I guess.

(No, I don't think so.)

I went school over there when I was little girl.

(How did you come to change from the Kiowa school and go to this other school?)

We had lots of people, children over there. Kiowas, Comanches, Apaches. Yeah that's all of them. Comanche, Kiowa, Apache, too.

(How come you changed from the Kiowa School and went to the Mission?)

They tear it all down you know. No more school over there you know. And we had to go to school at the mission.

(My! How many years did you go to school? Do you remember how long you went to school?)

I didn't go school much. Mission. We quit a long time ago.

(What was it like at school? Did you have to live there and spend the night there and everything?)

No. (She may not have understood the question.)

(Did they teach you to read and write at school?)

Yeah.

(What things did they teach you at school?)

I don't know that, you know.

MOLLY'S HUSBAND, RAILROAD CISCO, A TONKAWA

(Tell me how you met your husband?)

I don't know Tonkawa (language) you know. I don't know how they live, you know. One thing, I don't know that.

(How did you come to meet him?)

I married him, that's all. I don't know nothing about Tonkawas.

I don't know nothing.
