

(How did you become acquainted with him?)

I just met him, that's all. I don't know how they live, you know.

(But where was he living when you met him?)

I don't know. In Tonkawa you know. They moved them a long time ago. I guess they live this way, south some place, you know. It's all I know, you know. They just tell me, you know. He born in railroad train. Yeah, when they move back to Tonkawa, he was born in that railroad freight car, you know. That's why they give that name to him. "Railroad" Cisco. They give it to him, his name.

(Well, did he come down here to Cement to live or something?)

No, I don't marry when I stayed in Cement.

(Well, when did you get married?)

Anadarko was there, that's all.

(Where did you meet Railroad Cisco?)

Anadarko. That's all.

(Could you tell me any more about how you got acquainted with him?)

No. I just come to marry him and that's all.

(Was his family living in Anadarko?)

No, they die. All Tonkawas. No more Tonkawas. Down there we live long time no more Tonkawas. All they died. Just some children over there.

(Did you ever live up at Tonkawa?)

Yeah, we got home down there. My old man's got land over there. We moved back this way. We got over there. All they died.

(When you first got married, did you live down here or did you live up here at Tonkawa?)

We live at Tonkawa.

(Do you know how long you lived--about how long you lived up there?)

I don't know that. You know, I don't know that.

(How many children did you and Railroad have?)

About three, I guess.

(Buckley, Roy--)

That youngest one--my daughter--that girl died, and Buckley and
