

(Here follows a confusing conversation concerning Molly's half-sister's family.)

MOLLY'S GRANDFATHER ASSOCIATED WITH "GERONIMO" APACHES

(Did your grandparents ever travel very much. Like, did they ever take any trips to Mescalero or places like that?)

The old Apaches? Long time I guess, I don't know, you know. That one time I went down there where Ft. Sill Apaches. One old man told me, he said, he mean that my grandpa--Yáda'ílníY -- he said he stayed around down there where Ft. Sill Apache where they stay. He told me, and he tell me story. He talking about my grandfather, and they call his name. He said, "He stay with us right here--we go around on horse backs." He called my grandpa (name). We go around. We go horse back and we go to San Antone--They go horseback over there," he said. That one man tell me. "And we like to go horseback with Yáda'ílníY," he said.

(She's telling me about her grandfather--)

Yeah, they talk about him, long time ago.

(Who was that old man that was telling you this?)

I don't know his name. They Ft. Sill Apaches, I don't know her. He told me, he call my grandpa's name and when they quit talking-- I told him, "Hey, you called my grandpa's name". I tell her. They don't remember. He tell story, you know.

(What story did he tell?)

He just told me that they go horseback riding. Long time, long time. They just tell me.

(End of Tape)
