

(Where did pitmah live?)

They live with my father, all together.

(In the same tipi?)

Cecil: Yes.

(Did you have brothers and sisters?)

Cecil: Yes, my brother is Monroe. Monroe Tsatoke. And Willie--

(Is Monroe older than you are?)

Cecil: No, I'm the oldest one. He's the artist.

(Could you just name the children in your family, starting with yourself?)

Jenny: Your oldest sister. All of them--name them. Your oldest sister-- her Indian name (Jenny seems to remember the names of Cecil's relatives better than Cecil)-- 'é gó.gyahái.bô' That's his oldest sister. That was their first born child. And there's another girl--I don't know her name--

Cecil: I don't know her name, either.

Jenny: I don't know--I don't remember. It's way back there.

Cecil: Esther or--

Jenny: Essie. Essie Tsatoke, that's it. Then you came in--he (Cecil) came in. He's the third one. And then Willie-- Cecil: Ramona?

Jenny: Well, she'd next to Willie. Ramona Tsatoke. And then Monroe Tsatoke. He's the baby.

(Is Willie living now?)

Jenny: Yes.

(Is he the only one?)

Jenny: He's the only one. There's just two left--just him (Cecil) and Willie.

(How many children did your father's other wife have? Who are they?)

Jenny: (speaking of pitmah's children) The oldest one is gôbôt --Eddie.

Cecil: Yeah, gôbôt (or go bôk).
