

go on over there."

(What was Mr. Wylie's job, Dad?)

Well, he had charge of the Indian Department helping the boys and getting them in school, you know.

ED TAKES A SCHOOL AT HULBERT

I went over there after the seminary and after I finished my seminary, next fall I went to Northeastern. I went the whole term and then I started my second term, and Wylie called me into his office one day and told me we had a school out there in the country but the teacher quit and wanted to know if I wouldn't go out there and take that school. So I was broke and needed some money so I told him I'd go out there. Well, he sent out to Hulbert and then I walked from Hulbert about four miles west towards the river to a school out there. They called it Chisholm school. Log school house, and I went to an old Indian's house there to get a room, Sam Raper. He had a son named Poor Boy. Son--not his son, he daughter, her husband was Poor Boy and the two lived together with the old man. And the little old house, gosh, it wasn't big enough to rent, let alone me, but they give me room upstairs up in loft. And I stayed there with them. The old man was a full blood, Poor Boy was a full blood too, they all were full bloods. I took that school and I guess by golly there never has been a winter like there was there, because it snowed that winter and I went down to the school house one day and snow was coming in through the chinks of the logs and had a big drift of snow right at my stove. The stove was nearly covered up with a drift of snow. It was just an old log building with the chinks all out of it.

J.A. TAKES SUBSTITUTE TEACHING JOB FOR MYRTLE GLASS

J. A. Tyner: Do you remember Myrtle Glass?

Who?

Myrtle Glass, John Glass's sister? Myrtle?