

different places. All night travel. In the morning before suns up, we get on hill. We get on that mountain. Then why these people come in and ride through to that place there. Well, they smell a coffee pot - four miles. Because these people, Geronimo's people these men, they don't drink no coffee. They don't use nothing like that. They could smell a long ways. They the ones that smell that coffee out there - four miles. So they come in to this place, way before suns up. I saw they started fighting out there. Oh just fighting, fighting, fighting. We are safe, we was on the other hill. Then they just kept fighting, why - finally the Apache the woman, they get together up there somewhere. And this old lady they make a hole, dig a hole - big hole there and they go in there, and a lot of them stay in there. Some of them outside, some hide, they behind them trees. We call them, they say, "Come here fellows, stay out there, I'm running over here's a good place now." So they run over here before this bunch and knock him off. Too many shooting out there. There was a Mexican Army, just straight over there. So they couldn't get nobody in there. Then after a while, these fellows surround Geronimo. They didn't get enough ammunition so this little waste a few steps, about 15 steps to ammunition in sacks. Gun in a sack down there, but he couldn't get it. So they sent some old lady up there, they send a old lady, just pick him up and they knock him over. And then the next one, they go in there, and he just crawl in there and drag that ammunition in that hole there. So then they got plenty of ammunition then. They made a ditch right under them to tree from that hole, because each to dig the - all sand on the creek. They dig it. So two men under that trees in that ditch. They call 'em they was sharp shooter. These old Indians they know these two men. So they stay, they went in there when the Mexican Army just come in, because they was drunk. They was drunk, they don't care why they kill them or not. They just kill them anyway. This fellow come in there and just shoot, shoot, shoot, knocked
