

him, he got tired he can't walk. He feel so bad, got hurt, so they took and put a blanket and took him along out toward the mountain. And finally he told his men, he said, "Fellows just leave me alone. Just put me in the shade somewhere, put me in there and give me some to eat, little to eat and water and leave me there. I hate to give you all kind of trouble. You can't take me way up there. Before you get over there, you work hard, I be dead man. I don't want you to do that. So just leave me under that tree somewhere and give me something to eat and water, that's all I need, and let me die there. You fellows go ahead." So that's what they did. They left this man there and they went way up in the mountains, and when these - Warm Spring Apaches, about over 50 of them, maybe 75 got killed right there. And that's Geronimo's people, because he come after us with his men. His tribe back over there in the mountains. So this is just the Warm Spring Apaches, about 60 or 75 got kill right there. Must have been killed there. Then we went for about three days after, we went to that Geronimo's camp and they took us over there. They took - Geronimo took us over there. And then the camp, they - this woman her - man is fighter. She come along on a horse, bay horse with a six shooter, along there and look around. Her prisoner's - we are prisoners to them fellows, so they look around in there. From there they took us way up in - where lot of mountain's - lot of pines. They finally - they said they got plenty of men now they could fight more. So they come to the main road, like there is main highway I guess. The main road they came to, close to camp - close to there. Then they goes over there, close to that road and they see some soldiers coming on the road, why they waiting for them. Then us, the young boys they took ammunition in a sack we carried around for them. We was way behind, but then whenever they want ammunition they call us over there and we had to take it over there. So, and besides we take care of their horses. Then the start fighting out there. They fight and they fighting - they got
