

he find out. Then going to the big city somewhere. (Sentence not clear) I don't know. They going to trail them down there, trail them way down there in that big city. Then turn around. Then he went back over there to the camp that his father was killed. On that hill sitting down crying - he said, I sit down and cry like this. And somebody called me. My Indian name Goyathlay. - (speaks in Apache.) I never move, I never move he says. So I just listen, I just listen, he says, sit down, just listen and (Apache).
Your mother and your sister and your brother have been killed. The bodies down there in the big city. They in there now, just the bodies. And if you - if you believe me I'm going to tell you something. You get even with those people that kill your parents. Then right there after he was sitting down, you go back to the camp. Big camp over there, ask the chief, ask for his men for the war. And he says, he did go down there, that big chief he knows, he went to see him. He told him what the Mexicans done - this man said alright. Then he sent men to different camps. All them camps, lots of people.
He sent them all over about Geronimo. So he sent some old lady who talk Spanish pretty good. Sent her over there to - - where his father and mother's body was. This old lady she can understand pretty good. If she don't come back they don't care, because she pretty old. So they sent her up there. She told them that The Mexicans all army everywhere, get together and going to have a war with these people. So as this man, this lady, she came back. These Mexicans alright, they willing to fight, and they had plans to fight up there somewhere. They call them nigotohoaya, nigotohoaya, that's the place they going to have a fight. They get together over there. Then these Indians go over there. His men about four mile long. Just like they - on that side Mexican army. Just the same. All, there's lots of them on both sides. Then they just like this on each side. Finally, in a few days, he says that time, these men, these men that great big fellow - big men, they have great big
