

while those Mexicans just come in closer and closer. There's three officers. They the main ones coming in right close. Come right close get behind there's a few trees. After awhile they see these Apaches they kill those three officers, then they stop fighting right there. The Mexican's told them, "These three officers that you killed, that's your own tribe. That's Apache, both of them, three of them Indian Apaches. Your own tribe, you killed our own tribe." They told these Indians. And then that's all they done. Then they take these, the officer's they put him, have a wagon just fix like this - drag like this, they make a bed on there. This two wood and put it on the wagon. The wagon is for the mule and then they leading the mule and they taking these officers back. And later on they come back, and some how the mule got scared and run off and she fall down and all this rain coming down right there - anyway it was by that. He was shooting back toward the east somehow. Then these Indian scouts, they went back to Ft. Apache. They were there for about 2 weeks, then they call us, and at Ft. Apache, it's just about half a mile, they say - give us a ration. So we go before they do any-thing they surround us. Then they kind of army, white army calvary. So the officers coming in here, he call all these Indian scouts, just Apache - 50 of them. He put them on the line and march them through, on post there. Under that big flag, the United States flag. That's why they join the army, join the scouts. General Cook and Miles, told them that, he said, "Any of your folks, mother, father, sister, brother went - then you kill it if you see them." Everybody raise their hands, to kill his own family. Well, anyway their raise their hand. General Miles said, any of these other old man ever been out there with Geronimo? Yeah, some of them here. The fellow's name, Martin Kato. He's one of them. Then there's Charles Marteen, there's another man. Two of them been raised up there with Geronimo. So he send for these two men to come over here to the office, then made them Indian scouts: But I didn't know what, what the promise for doing that, I
