

think 'was going on?)

Well, there was all this mishandling of our money and stealing the money and doing a lot of things with our money that wasn't right.

(And your land, too wasn't it?)

And our land. That's right.

(And you went into court didn't you. Tried to have a court appointed to get the records straightened out?)

That's right.

Mrs. Dicke: And he wanted to have an auditor to come and check the books and see what all this money has been going and how it was spent. He wanted them to come in and check that, but they never did do it, not to this day they haven't done it yet. They had to make more--

(Have they got a law firm somewhere in Oklahoma City that's doing some of this? That's trying to run down some of those checks? Who got them and so forth?)

Yeah.

Mrs. Dicke: There's one gap, I think it is one whole year and I think it's 1962 and then after 1963--

I'm still trying to get the present count--better get that thing rolling.

(Now I think what you started way back there--now is bearing fruit, Sam. I think they are trying to get some investigation. They changed their attorneys and their having some auditing done and I think what you started is really paying off. It was pretty hard for awhile to do it?)

Yeah. One of the things I was trying to get the council to do was to hire a local attorney that would handle our business. Not the one in Washington, D.C. because he wasn't doing them any good. We need somebody we can call and he could set with the council and advise the council what to do, what they suppose to do. That was the thing I'm still--

(You were threatened were you when you were in this law suit? Threatened to kill you, didn't they?)
