

events. This is the Indian way that we're going to do this. But what do you call the Indian way of doing things? At any kind of an event when somebody says now we're going to do this the Indian way, what do they normally mean that they're going to do?)

Well, now days, I really don't know what they mean, now days. According to the life of what they doing, now days, I don't believe anybody knows. All excepting they want to be--try to do it, but I really don't know and I don't believe that the other Indians really don't know. But here's one thing I'm going to say this, the Indian when they first started, is this, they say if you want to be honest, Indian rights, Indian heritage, you should be honest to it, and then live accordingly, and if he's honest to himself, well, peoples going to be honest to him likewise. So that's the philosophy of the rights of the Indians. So sometimes we're not true to ourself, we try to do what other peoples doing. We keep on doing it to (where we just got it down to nothing, as far as I can see it.

(And such a mixture doesn't amount to anything?)

Yeah, that's right. That's how I see it. 'Course there's a lot of people that's got a lot of different ideas of doing things and saying things, that, honestly, I really don't know what is going on now, but I couldn't sanction anything that they are doing now, actually.

(Is most--when they say they are going to do it the Indian way, doesn't it refer to, usually, to Indian ceremony, or, Indian pow-wow or something, that they were going to try to do something like--oh, I've heard them at give-aways, special dances, and special honors, they say sometimes that it's the Indian way to give somebody an honor. That doesn't go over--how far does that go into outside of pow-wow? Doing things an Indian way?)

WHAT IS A POW WOV - WHAT IS A CEREMONY

Well, the first things I want to say a pow-wow, I don't know anything about
