

And he never married. But he's a grown man. He learned a lot of this what we call 'Native American Church.' He learned lot of that. So they got things together. And they fixed him up in a wardrobe, you know. Pick out good horses. They they got best warriors to take him. So this chief, the chief of this tribe, he got everything ready. So finally they came; so they depart from this tribe. When he left, well, he travelled several days. But this man, he knows just certain place where his people would camp, you know, certain season. So he followed that idea. So finally they got so far, these people, these young warriors that was with him. Well, they were told to go that far. So, these warriors, they turn around. So this young man, well, he went on. He just know what place these people would be. So he come to that place, you know. Sure enough, just on the other side of the hill these peoples are camped. So he camped there that night.

. Next morning he got ready. He put on his best, you know, just like them peoples fixed it up. He wanted to approach the best way. So he had some of that medicine with him. So early morning he could hear the camp. Everything's moving. So every morning his sweetheart climbs that hill, you know, look towards the sun, still think about this young man. So somehow this young lady, she kinda missed that morning. But somehow another man was watering his horses, you know. So this fellow that's watering his horses, he looked up and seen this fellow. They're almost about the same age. So he recognized him. Boy, he thought he was seeing things. So this young man says, "No," he says, "Just don't feel noways. I'm back home," he says.. "All in one piece. I got long story. Don't be afraid. Just go back down to the camp and tell the leader that I'm home."

So this fellow he jumped on a horse. Just left his horses there and took out towards the camp. So he went to that leader's tent. So he told
