

or two. But I don't know just what happened. Whether he shot George or not. Don't remember now.

Unidentified Voice: Lonnie told me about it. Said he didn't want to hurt him. George was a little squatty like guy. But every time he'd go around that house he'd get a little madder. So he said to himself, "Now when I get around to that chimney, I am gonna try to stop 'im." So here comes George with a 44 Winchester, shot right through here and he dropped that gun. He just reached down and picked up and shot 'im right here, shot right in the heart. George wasn't bigger'n a pound of soap, but he was mean. Boy, that boy was mean. Katherine Wilhite's brother.

(Tell me about that other mean one--they call Lincoln Christie.)

Lincoln Wolf.

(Lincoln Wolf?)

I reckon he was one of the meanest Indian boys in the country, I guess. So, they was having a big picnic up at Rocky Mountain school at one time, big gathering, and 'course Lincoln, he goes there and he thought he was goin' to break up the meeting, you know. And Dan Smith happened to be one of the deputies there to keep peace. And so, him--and he got in a squabble with Dan Smith just had to--shot him there and killed him right there on the ground. Oh, let's see. You remember where we went to school house way over there somewhere? Somewhere in the hills. What was the name of that school house?

(Rock Mountain school house?)

Yeah. That's where that shooting took place. Dan Smith had it to do, I guess, or else he'd got killed. So, he just shot old Lincoln down.

FISH KILLING - FAMILIES GET TOGETHER FOR THIS

(I would like to hear about that fish killing.)

Well, they--it just all Indian affair, what it was. They would set date
