

talking about, there's too much jealousy. And it gets to the point if he and I do something or even if I was the leader of something that was accomplished, and we were officers of that, of that group that accomplished something. Looking back, I would say this, what we accomplish is what we done. This means a lot to all of us that did something.

MORE THOUGHT ABOUT LIFE OF INDIANS

Howard: What we try to do around here is not to better ourselves. It's to try to help the people, you know. The way my experience, the way I look at it, if they, if we do something that they don't like, they hang back. And we just go on ahead and do it. Then, they always come back.

(Is that your philosophy on the tribal council now, is to try to move ahead as fast as you can and hope the rest of the people stay up with you?)

Yes, because if you let them get a hold of you and hold you back, well, they'll hold you there. But if you just go on, well, they'll join you. They'll go with you in time, not right then. When they see that they can't hold you down or hold you back, they'll move along with you.

MORE CAN BE ACCOMPLISHED BY GROUP UNITY AND PARTICIPATION

(Well I've taken a lot of you fellows time and I may have to write for you to take home to your wife but I want to thank you for your time.)

Howard: Let me say this one thing. If I made the statement, what we accomplished is what we did. I think it's wrong when someone who accomplished something and says, "I did it." That individual glory just doesn't get it with a group of people.

(Do you think that applies just to Indians or to most groups?)

I think, most groups, most groups. Like right now, I'm always saying you know we got to get involved in politics, it's politics I don't care how
