

Well, it's different ones. Jimmy Belvin he--he's the principal one course they have other members, you know, some maybe in McAlester, Muskogee. These other office holders, you know, maybe outa Muskogee.

CHIEF ELECTIONS:

(Have you voted for chiefs?)

Huh?

(Have you ah, got to vote when the chief's elected?)

I don't know whether I have or not, you know, I don't remember. But I guess I have. Like it's done now. They have voting there--you can vote any way you want. They have blanks you can fill out. You can vote any way you want to.

(You know Choctaws have elected. You know they've had people vote for their chiefs for quite a long time where some of the tribes that it--it was just passed down, you know. The father was a chief and the son was gonna be a chief. Very much like royalty. Kings from other countries.)

I don't know how this comes about. I don't know what--I ain't--he appointed by the president. (unin.) Ain't appointed by the president or somethin' like that. I think--

(I think the President approves it after the members of the tribe select him or elect him.)

Maybe so. I don't know just how that is.

(Do you think most of them will they want to sell the land other than holding that amount?)

I think the majority of them will.

(Did you get any idea of how much per capita payment they'd get out of it?)

Well, it won't be too much. I just heard though, course nobody knows, yet. Maybe get a $100. And that'll be about it. You see all these officeholders and everythin' like that is gettin all this money. You know. And these schools and then some of us get nothin'. Big part of that money.

(Wonder how many officeholders you have?)

I don't know. There's lots of em though. Like Jimmy Belvin. He gets lot of that money. These schools and all these office workers at Muskogee. All these schools
