

remember whether he was a chief, or might been captain.

(Lighthorseman?)

Yeahsuh, I think he was a chief, though.

(George Chupco, he was Creek?)

Yes suh, he was a Creek.

(Well, you know the Seminoles the Chupcos, don't you--who lived, ah, what was the name of the--he was the chief one time, before--I think he beat John Brown--was it John Chupco?)

There was a Chupco, as you say, but I never did know him. He musta come behind him--

((John Brown?))

No, John Jumper.

(Oh, Jumper?)

Yes suh. John Brown was elected behind Jumper.

(Who beat John Borwn, along about 1900?)

Old man, ah, old fellow called Hulbutta.

(Hulbutta Micco?)

That's it.

(Now, he served one term and John Brown beat him again.)

Beat him again.

(And served until statehood.)

Yeah, that's it, he sho did.

(That's it. The Chupco I'm thinking of was before John Jumper, because he led the--)

I say, I've heard dat name all right.

(--he led the Loyal, so called Loyal Seminoles to Kansas during the Civil War.)

That's it, that's it.

(Do you remember, do you know whether dey colored people went with the Seminoles to Kansas during the Civil War?)

Oh yeah.

(Do you know some of them wholse families still live here?) Some of the names?)

No suh, I sho don't.
