

back, I may know a man, Pompeii Davis time.

(That was back in the 1880's, then?)

Yes sir. Well, ah, I was thinking that, I know one by the name of Coasar, old man Cosar, and ah, Chu-co-lee-see was another one.

(What was the name?)

Chu-co-lee-see.

(Chocolesee?)

Yeah, he was a Indian.

(Mrs. McIntosh: And who was the Billy Cully?)

That's right, Billy Cully was another one.

(You're doing pretty well yourself, mam!)

Uhhhh-Lawd, my rememberingings so bad.

(Well, let me ask you something. Did you attend any of the trial that, ah, of the people charged with crimes?)

No suh, no suh--no--back there?

(uh huh. Did you later on, fter you were older?)

Yes sir, I went in Governor Brown's time. I went, you know, and set and listened at the council and so on.

(Who served as judge of the court?)

Governor Brown.

(And the council members were the jury?)

That's right, that's right. You might call them the jury--yes.

(They were the ones who brought in the verdict and Governor Brown passed sentence?)

Passed the sentence, when they find, when they find, ah say, find me guilty, then he passed the sentence.

(Did the Lighthorsemen ever serve as judge or jury--)

No, no.

(--in trails?)

They'd be there, you know, to hear the trials.

(They were used as witnesses, took were they?)
