

(Uh-huh. It is near that old tree?)

Mrs. Oaks: Yes. You can see it all in one stop. It isn't as far as the street from this house. And the house was some of these - whose house was that - same one at the famous tree?

TWO GOVERNOR LEFLORES

Mr. Oaks: Oh, I believe it was old Governor Leflore.

Mrs. Oaks: Some notorious person back in those days -

Mr. Oaks: I think it was built years ago when old Governor LeFlore - I think the Choctaws had two LeFlores that was Governor. It was pretty soon after they came to - after their ancestors came here from Mississippi.

Voice in background: Who was Mack LeFlore?

Mr. Oaks: Oh, I don't know. He was an old timer. He was as old as I am now when I was just a kid, and he lived right here. Don't you remember an old timer, LeFlore? He - I used to know some of the LeFlores over at Bokchito and Bennington.

Mr. Oaks: This one was over by Summerfield - west of Wister - Do you know where Summerfield is? Yeah. Near Talihina. There's a depot down there. Do you remember old Judge Holson? You remember him?

Voice: Yeah. I heard of him. Well, he and Mack LeFlore were some kin in some way or another, I don't know - went to school there. He was Judge Holson's. But as far as him being judge, I don't know about that. They called him Judge, might be mean for all I know.

Mr. Oaks: Well, there was (sentence not clear). I used to go up there. I think there were two of those LeFlores that had been governor of the Choctaws.

Voice: Mack and Joe?

Mr. Oaks: I don't know. I think it give the given names but I don't remember - it might a been, but it goes back a long ways.

ELIXIR SPRINGS

(Well, we'll have to check on that when we get up around Poteau. Before we came back to that paper - we were talking about a spring up here where they had a - what's the name of that?)

Mrs. Oaks: Elixir Springs?

(Elixir Springs?)

Mrs. Oaks: Yes, Elixir Springs. Elixir is Choctaw word but I don't know how to spell it. But that's the name of it.
