

((BIDDING VISITORS GOODBYE))

Issac: Well, be good haints. ((XOMANCHE WORD FOR FRIEND))

Visitor: Got to go, they honking at me. Well, I'll see you my friend.

(Do you feel like telling me some stories?)

Who me?

(Yeah.)

Oh, sometimes I feel good, sometimes I feel like I get tired you know--sit around. I like to tell you good stories, but you know, well I make them stories myself. I just wondering how I fix them. You know, when I tell stories, sometimes just mess it all up, you know. But I'll tell you one, but it got to be in a quiet place where no people, nobody--we go in there and I'll tell you.

(Anytime you feel like it.)

Well, I tell you best I can, you know. This other one, it just, you know, like I seen in magazines. I seen some magazines and they goes like this. You know, you white people, you want to know what's why on top of that high mountain, and so this young man said,--he had some neighbors round about him, you know. He got home there and they lived at foot of this big high mountain. I don't know the name of this mountain but anyway, this young mind, he wants to go on top of this biggest mountain and see what's going up there. He went among his friend. Hereand there, try to get an extra man, maybe three man to go along with him. And so he went around the house, going ask the young mans, about his age, and he couldn't get noone. But he finally decided, he already make up his mind, he's going to go up there on top of this mountain to see what's up there. His wife was living. They living at the foot of the mountain, but they didn't have no children. This young man was married, justlike this man here. Got a young wife and they both were young you know, and so this young man said, "They ain't nobody that's going along with me. I'm going to rest about a day or two. When I get on top of the mountain real good and r sted." He told his wife, "Fix me up a good food and water to carry on top. And give him what clothes he had." So he dressed up, next two days, he decide to go up on top of the mountain--the tallest mountain. He wants to go up there and see what'sgoing on. So finally he came to
