

him all over, his face and just lick him, I put all that his medicine over him. Next morning he got up right quick. He look around his house and there wasn't nobody around. Just like that white bear told. Get up, look around, and start moving. So he got up and start walking and there wasn't a thing wrong with him. "Don't look back when you go on. Go on straight east." He went on. Kept going, going, going. Wasn't a thing wrong with him. He's well. This white bear doctor him. Give him the treatment that night, and he went on. That morning. Just kept so far, so many distance. Then finally when he come up on a high hill, there was smoke way, way down there. Down in the valley there was smoke. He just kept towards it. Kept going. And he come up to little hill, there some Indian people got homes there. Some of them building fires, you know, cooking. Kept coming. When he got so far, this man got up, came towards him, and woman and another woman. They come up to meet him. Ask him, "Who are you?" "Oh, I'm the man that dimbed that mountain," he said. "Oh, our son-in-law come back. This is your wife here. Our daughter, that's your wife. (She got lonesome and got hungry and she left there and come to find us here and then we was glad that she came home. Now we glad whole lets better. You want to come home again too. Our son-in-law, that's your wife. You could live wherever you want to. Live with us or move a way from us. Get you a place and make your home. "That's the way it end, eight there.

(Good one! I guess they did that a lot in the old days? The men had to go out by themselves to pray.)

Yeah. You got it recorded.

(Mary was telling me something about where the Comanches came from before they got into this part of Oklahoma. Do you no anything about that?)

Well, she knows ((REFERRING TO MARY POAPFYBITTY, HIS SISTER)) She's an older woman. She's older than I am, you know. She know all that--how we staying in this Oklahoma. The time was the opening of this Oklahoma. When this chief was here, Quanah Parker--in early days you know. But me, I'm so green, I don't know how
