

Yeah.

(If somebody is crazy, is there anyway you could help them?)

Yeah., I guess you could help them. You know, that little out-fit, that we was looking for up there where you all seen those big rattlenakes, that's good for it. Get them well. ((SHE IS REFERRING TO A MEDICINE CALLED T PINATSU, WHICH MEANS "ROCK MEDICINE." IT IS THE MATRIX OF THE EGG DEPOSITORIES OF A VARIETY OF MASON BEE.)) I ain't got hardly any now--just little bit. Little piece. That one you broght me back, I got little bit of that left.

(Would they inhale that?)

Just inhale that and cedar them with that cedar. Give them that medicine.

(Have you had to doctor somebody for that twisted face since we got that?)

No. But there's a woman down here at Boone, she's been trying to get me. I never did ask her--she ask me if I want to fix her. But its been so cold, I been home these past few weeks, I haven't seen her yet. She said she would come and see me but she never did.

(If you see somebody sick, can you ask them--tell them that you could help them?)

No. They have to come to me.

(If I was a Indian and I got twisted face ((SHOST SICKNESS)) is there anybody I would have to send to you to ask about doctoring me?)

Yeah, you could do that.

(Is there any special people?)

No, they ain't no special people. Just tell them, "Tell her I want to fix up" like that. "A k her to fix me up." That's all

(Do most peoples send somebody to ask you or do they come themselves?)

They always tell somebody to come and ask me--help them like that.
