

down Grande River then?)

Yeah.

(Around Kenwood, Salina, and there's lots of good Indians along in there too.)

Yeah. I tell you, sometime if you just went to fool around, I can talk their language and sometimes next week if you want. I got things to do this week. If you want to go down and go around there.

(Alright, yeah, I'd like to. We'll just take a day and drive around.)

I got things to do this week. It's been so wet, you can't see these strawberries right here. Them's wild ones. Yeah, I went, I got a boy lives in Gentry, Arkansas. He's got an eighty acre farm out there and pastures, I pulled them out of his farm. Them over there them's tames ones, these wild ones right here.

(These wild ones got a better taste to them.)

Yeah, they're not as big. They're sweeter and got a better flavor. They're not very big. They're not blooming as much as they ought to. I don't know.

(Maybe they'll start blooming when the ground dries up a little.)

Yeah, they're blooming but slower. Maybe they come on later. I got to go put in a little garden. Just something to piddle with. A fellow just can't sit down and twiddle his thumbs, you know.

(No, a man when he retires, he's got to keep doing something.)

I've been busy all of my life. By George, I've been busy.

(Yeah, I've visited lots of Indians, all up through Delaware County and Adair County. They're pretty well scattered. But there's still lots of them around. Up around Vinita there's a lot of them. Some of them are
